Interactive Program Guide, Inc.

“Remote Recording” to Begin Free of Charge on May 1st.
The Third Service: “G-GUIDE Remote Access”
Joins “G-GUIDE” and “G-GUIDE MOBILE” Services

Interactive Program Guide, Inc. has developed a next-generation G-GUIDE service, “G-GUIDE Remote Access,” which provides a seamless usage environment for the electronic program guide (EPG) in connecting mobile phones and computers to home TVs and DVRs using network communications. In the first phase of the service, starting May 1st, IPG will provide a remote recording function that will allow users to conveniently set recordings on home DVRs from mobile phones after completing a simple, initial registration, free of charge (aside from the usual packet communications fee).

IPG who provides the “G-GUIDE” service for TVs and DVRs (with 9 million cumulative shipment units) and the “G-GUIDE MOBILE” service for mobile phones (with over 5.5 million registered users), is now bringing these two services together in launching “G-GUIDE Remote Access”, its third service. “G-GUIDE” and “G-GUIDE MOBILE” will continue to be pre-installed and the user-friendly and convenient service offered by “G-GUIDE” will be further strengthened and enhanced by plans to have the “G-GUIDE Remote Access” function also pre-installed in both.

The remote recording function can be found on Sony's "Sugo-roku" series of HDD-equipped DVRs with a built-in digital Hi-Vision tuner, due to be released in May (three models: RDZ-D97A/D77A/D87), and on the “FOMA”SO902i (with downloads from the “iMode” information site “Toku-suru” menu scheduled to be provided starting May 1st).
